

WEDDING OF POPULAR COUPLE TAKES PLACE AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

In the presence of a large circle of friends and relatives, a wedding of much interest to Daly City was solemnized at St. John's Episcopal church last Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Miss Winifred O'Rourke, of 263 Evergreen avenue, became the bride of Mr. Richard Plath, of 210 Lawrence avenue, Ocean View, the Rev. Tracy officiating.

The altar and chancel made a beautiful setting, adorned with potted palms and huge baskets of white chrysanthemums.

During the marriage ceremony Mr. Carl Meyer sang "At Dawning," accompanied by Miss Mary Neubaumer at the organ.

The bride was given away by her mother, Mrs. Jean O'Rourke. Mr. Bert Plath, brother of the groom, was the best man, and the ushers were Alfred Gander and Hosmer Smith.

The bride wore a handsome afternoon gown of dark blue transparent velvet, with a large picture hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

Mrs. Alfred Gander, a girlhood chum of the bride, was matron of honor and wore an afternoon gown of Alice blue satin and a large picture hat to match, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Jean O'Rourke, librarian at the John D. Daly library, and T. O'Rourke, one of Daly City's councilmen. She has resided on Evergreen avenue ever since childhood, attending Crocker school from first grade through the graduating class.

Mr. Plath is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Plath, who have resided in Ocean View for many years, conducting a wholesale nursery there.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the States Cafe, after which the bride and groom left for a motor trip through the southern part of the state. Upon their return, on October 15, they will be at home to their friends in their pretty bungalow at 203 Lawrence avenue, which Mr. Plath had built for his bride.

SPLENDID LECTURE ON THE PHILIPPINES

Last Sunday evening there was the largest attendance at the Daly City M. E. church that has been noted for a regular service for months. We all enjoyed the splendid lecture by Dr. Riley on the Philippines.

Next Sunday morning and evening will be rally day in the church. We are trying to get the largest church attendance that we have yet had. We can have a real rally day if everyone that reads this article will consider it a personal invitation and come.

The pastor's subject for Sunday evening will be, "On the Street Called Straight." Special musical numbers are being arranged.

Sunday school at 10 o'clock and Sunday morning services at 11.

The Epworth League, consisting of a live group of young people, invite the young people of the community to their service each Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

Here is something to look forward to. On October 28 we are to have a fellowship dinner at 6:30, after which Dr. E. H. Longbrake will address us on the subject, "Theodore Roosevelt, the American." Put this down in your date book and plan to come.

Our Aims—A full church, morning and evening; a Sunday school of 150; an Epworth League of 50; and a consecrated membership.

You can worship God in your home Sundays—But you don't.

You can worship God in the woods and in the fields—But you don't.

You can worship God by the lakes and the rivers—But you don't.

You can worship God on the road, in the auto or train—But you don't.

You can worship God in a different church each Sunday—But you don't.

You can worship God by sending the children to Sunday school and stay at home—But you don't.

You can worship God by coming to church with the children—But do you?

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Minister.

CELEBRATES SIXTH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Foss, of 123 Los Banos avenue, entertained a number of her son's little friends in honor of his sixth birthday. After playing games and having a good time in general, little Ernest led his friends to the dining room, where they found many good things to eat, including, of course, the birthday cake made by his mother. The children present were Evelyn and Dorothy Hammer, Raymond Nyland, Iesta Arnando, Milton and Thelma Larsen, Roy and George Johnson, Cleo and Evelyn Bales, Vondal Garbiline, Robert, Donald and Marian Foss.

HAPPILY CELEBRATE 20TH ANNIVERSARY

A large number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. George Lagomarsino from five cities assembled at the beautiful new home near the State Theatre to congratulate them upon their twentieth anniversary, their promising family and their general success, last Saturday evening.

The good wishes of each guest were received with every sign of sincere appreciation and when the last one had arrived all were ushered into the spacious hall, where the tables were artistically arranged and decorated with dainty flowers.

With considerable merriment everyone found his or her place card.

W. J. Savage was appointed toastmaster, and for three hours there was a veritable feast of soul and flow of reason; the good things served and heartily relished were only equalled by the bright thoughts expressed.

Hearty cheers and spirited singing added zest to the celebration. The sweet voices of the North Beach rendering Italian operas met their match in the representatives of the Irish, singing the popular songs of America, and altogether, with great vim, they sang our own national songs.

When the feast was over the tables were cleared and put out of the way, and, to the strains of an excellent three piece orchestra, dancing occupied the attention of both the old and the young until long past midnight. From beginning to end, it was such a pleasant affair that nearly every one hoped for a repetition at an early date.

The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. George Lagomarsino, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Benassini, Mr. and Mrs. August Bertrand, Mr. and Mrs. John Bignotti, Mr. and Mrs. James Bignotti, Mr. and Mrs. James Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Cattori, Mr. and Mrs. John Depauli, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Fellows, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gock, Supervisor and Mrs. Thomas L. Hickey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hickey, Mr. and Mrs. George Knippenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Pretzel, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Piel, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rossi, Mr. and Mrs. William Raffetto, Mr. and Mrs. August Risso, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Risso, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. John Sermatei, Jr., and Mrs. Martin Castell, Mrs. Emma Rice Bertrand, Evelyn Brennan, Eleanor Depauli, Mae Lagomarsino, Josephine Lagomarsino, Evelyn Lagomarsino, Jeanette Lagomarsino, Millie Lagomarsino, Ethel Sweeney; Messrs. Timothy Kennedy, Giuseppe Lagomarsino, W. J. Savage, John Sermatei, Jr., Leslie Brennan, George Rossi, Ernest Devenenzi, Alfred Bignotti, Ray Sweeney, Romano Pelligrini, John Bignotto, Jr., William Sweeney, Jr., Harry Ashenbremer, Joseph Saper, Alexander Savio and John Boronio.

INTERESTING SERVICE AT GRACE CHURCH

The topic for next Sabbath evening at Grace Presbyterian church is "Insurance, Property and Life." Is it right and Biblical. Can we afford it, and is it too expensive? If you are interested in the welfare of the home and the family you will find it will pay to attend this service.

Last Sabbath was a good day with the church and Sunday school, and plans are being made to spend more time with the study of the Bible lessons and more time in singing God's praises. If this church and school is worth perpetuating, then it must reach the very springs of life and inspire the boys and girls to live Christian lives, and that is what we aim to have them become. More time with Christ and less with creed is our motto.

The banner of the rally day will be awarded this Sunday.

The preacher and teacher may give to the community the precepts, but unless we all give the example of Christian living, the precept will fall helpless. Help to give the example.

The minister of Grace church will speak at the Ladies Home on University avenue next Sabbath at 2 o'clock. C. E. service at 7 p. m.

The ladies of the Guild served a most excellent luncheon on Wednesday noon, and many words of appreciation were spoken. From this time on the ladies will serve this regular luncheon, the first Wednesday of each month.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

Former Resident Returns

Miss J. Donovan, of Boyes Springs, who at one time conducted the dry goods store at 5999 Mission street, has been visiting for a few days this week at the home of Mrs. S. Griffin, on Winchester street. Miss Donovan recently returned from a visit in Portland and Seattle and reports having had a wonderful time.

Trading at Home

Campaigns having for their object the encouragement of buying products manufactured at home, and the patronizing of local merchants, have been carried out in various communities with varying success for many years.

Nearly everyone agrees that the idea of patronizing the local merchant, and buying products made at home, is sound in principle, but many fail to put it into practice when the time comes to buy, and sometimes give the excuse that they can purchase their merchandise a trifle cheaper by trading in some other community.

Any small local industry which manufactures a worthy product and sells it at a reasonable price might be enabled to grow large through the loyal support of home people. And the local merchant, conducting business on a small scale, and selling at a reasonable price, may be enabled to enlarge his quarters, add a better selected and larger stock, providing the people of his home town consistently buy their merchandise at home.

This would result in increased payrolls, an increase in the consumption of locally produced raw materials, build up increased taxable wealth, and in every way contribute to the progress and prosperity of the community.

These are trite and self-evident facts which have been put forward time and again, yet many otherwise good citizens deliberately contribute to the upbuilding of other cities at the expense of their own towns and counties, through failing to patronize home industries and home mercantile establishments.

The simple policy of buying at home would do more for the average town than can be accomplished by all the commercial organizations and boosters' clubs which may be maintained. These organizations are needed of course, but their efforts should be aided by the all-important policy of supporting the enterprises already present in the community.

The money you spend at home may come back to you, but that spent in another city or county seldom, if ever, returns.

PRETTY WEDDING AT ST. MAXIMUS CHURCH

Miss Grace Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Johnston, of 6238 Mission street, was married at an impressive nuptial mass on Saturday evening, October 1, at St. Maximus church, by the Rev. Father James P. Donohoe, to Mr. Joseph Bachigalupi.

The bride, a pretty blonde, was given in marriage by her father, Mr. David Johnston. She made a charming picture in her wedding gown of French Farmer satin and veil of tulle held in place by orange blossoms and pearls and carrying a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Theresa O'Connor was the maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were the bride's sister, Mrs. C. J. Pettigrew and her cousin, Miss Edna Phelan. Miss O'Connor wore a gown of turquoise blue taffeta and georgette, trimmed with silver, and taffeta picture hat to match. She carried pink bridesmaid roses. The bridesmaids wore blue and orchid crepe de chine dresses and carried red Pauline roses. The flower girls, Mary Phelan and Catherine Core, wore dresses of pink and blue satin and carried baskets of tiny tea roses and orange blossoms. The ring bearer, little Miss June Core, was dressed in a suit of French Farmer satin and took her part very creditably for such a tiny Miss.

Mr. Mario Johnson, nephew of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. J. E. Johnston and Mr. Joseph Johnson.

During the ceremony, Miss Kathryn Phelan sang "Ave Maria," accompanied by the Misses Edna and A. Ballser at the organ and violin.

Following the wedding ceremony, the bridal party, with relatives and intimate friends, motored to the Bay View Hotel, San Francisco, where a wedding dinner was in readiness.

During the evening the Golden State orchestra, conducted by Donald McNally, furnished music for dancing, after which the young people left for a honeymoon trip to Arizona. On their return they will reside in a new home Mr. Bachigalupi had built for his bride at 47 Wilson street.

Among the guests were: Misses A. Lucey, M. Harvey, Edna Phelan, Agnes Gillies, Bernice Gillies, Tessie O'Connor, Kathryn Phelan, J. McDonald, Marie Shaw, Frances Sims, Louise Bachigalupi, Edna Ballser, and A. Ballsen; Messrs. N. Valente, Frank Shaw, Jerry Breit, S. Alioto, John Ragghianti, Frank Flores, Louis Parmisano, Lloyd Kennedy, Charles Farmer, H. Christian, Sam Parmisano, Donald McNally, John Donahue, J. E. Johnstone, Tony Milano, Fred Benedetti, William King, Art Graham, Mat Flores and Mickey Volanti; Mesdames K. Phelan, P. Buckley, L. Shaw, H. Gilles, MacNally; Mr. and Mrs. F. Lorenz, Mr. and Mrs. Ferarri, Mr. and Mrs. David Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Pettigrew, Mr. and Mrs. A. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. E.

'MATCH THIEF' NOW BEHIND THE BARS

The police department reports that the "match thief," responsible for many burglaries in Daly City, Ocean View and Mission Terrace district, has been captured by the San Francisco police and is being held in the San Francisco jail pending his trial. Most of the stolen articles have been recovered and claimed by their owners, although quite a lot is still out and articles are being located every day.

By the arrest of the "match thief" it does not mean that the people should become careless and cease to co-operate with the local police. There are many more characters such as the one captured, and without fail at all times the people should lock all windows and doors when leaving their homes.

A careful patrol of this district is being made by the local police, and at all times when seeing any suspicious looking characters or machines loitering in your neighborhood, without fail ring Randolph 55, the Daly City police station.

WAR BEING WAGED ON ILLEGAL HEADLIGHTS

"Many automobile accidents can be attributed to defective headlight equipment," says John T. Doyle, chief of police of Daly City, who is co-operating with California Public Safety Conference in a drive on illegal headlights.

Chief Doyle points out two evils which seem to predominate at night. One is driving with glaring headlights and the other with only one headlight. Driving with only one headlight is perhaps the most dangerous practice, since it is impossible to tell if a motorcycle or an automobile is approaching. This is especially true when it is the left hand light which is out. Chief Doyle urges all motorists to take especial pains during this month to see that the headlight equipment complies with the law.

HOSTESS AT LUNCHEON

Miss Thais Kirkpatrick was hostess at a luncheon last Saturday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Dave Campbell, 101 Santa Cruz avenue, entertaining the 1922 June Lux Alumni. The guests included Lois Williams, Viola Kennedy, Dr. Alice Ahtye, Olive Barnum Coleman, Edlo Morton Jenkle, Doris Holtz, Morva Owens Horton, Mildred Dow, Fern Scott Kelgin, Eleanor Noethig, Madeleine Church Potts, Margaret Cavanaugh, Celia Bertocchi, Pearl Mascovitz, Gene Wilbert, Ellen Knowles.

Mico, Mr. and Mrs. W. Cavignaro, Mr. and Mrs. A. Landini, Mr. and Mrs. A. Parmisano, Mr. and Mrs. W. Core and family, Mr. and Mrs. M. Johnson and family and Mrs. E. Allezzetti and daughters.

BLINDCRAFT WEEK OCTOBER 10 TO 15

October 10 to 15, inclusive, will be Blindcraft week, Mayor Rolph of San Francisco having issued a proclamation in which he announces that this week has been set aside especially to call attention to the many useful articles which the blind manufacture, including rattan and reed furniture, ferneries, baskets of all kinds, rugs, brooms, etc., and to urge the citizens particularly to make a purchase of any of these products during the week. The purchase of one of their products will not only prove useful, but will enable the Blindcraft people to further their constructive work among the blind.

The Blindcraft factory is a civic asset to this section. Employment is given in this factory to an average of seventy blind men and women who otherwise would be out of employment. These employees have been taught to produce a varied assortment of quality merchandise comparable with any found upon the open market. As they become more and more proficient, the volume of production increases. In the meantime, the list of blind who seek employment daily increases. It will not be possible for the Blindcraft factory to care for an added number of blind until the purchasing public realizes the importance of giving preference to Blindcraft products.

Blindcraft week is a week of publicity. Its object is to educate the public regarding the wonderful constructive work being carried on in the Blindcraft building, at 1097 Howard street, San Francisco, for the handicapped men and women of this section. Readers of the Record are extended a cordial invitation to visit Blindcraft building during this publicity week. The building will be open to the public from 10 to 12 in the mornings, 2 to 4 in the afternoons, and from 7 to 9 in the evenings. Employees will be on duty to explain the process of broom making and furniture making, and other details throughout the building.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS MEET

The fire commissioners held their regular monthly meeting at the City Hall, last Monday evening, at 8 o'clock. Reports of the fire companies were received and bills ordered paid.

The picnic committee of the Daly City Volunteer Fire Department held a meeting, with Chief Kennedy in the chair. Thursday evening, October 20, was set aside as the date for the final meeting, and all companies were ordered to make their final returns at that time.

The fire commissioners request the people at the time of a fire not to crowd too close to the fire apparatus, and to keep clear the street on which the fire is located. They not only run the danger of having their machines damaged, but interfere with the men at work. The fire marshals have been instructed to clear the street of such machines, and anyone refusing to obey their orders will be placed under arrest.

Fire Commissioners Augustien, Schenck, Michelson, Hutchings and Brady announce that there is a standing reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of anyone turning in a false alarm.

PARENT-TEACHERS' MEETING

The Crocker-Pershing P. T. A. held its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday afternoon in Company No. 4 fire house. Five new members were admitted and plans were laid for a busy year. Mrs. George Augustien was elected vice-president to fill the chair left vacant by Mrs. Tompsett's removal to Los Angeles. A food sale will be held at the fire house on Peoria street and Evergreen avenue on Saturday morning, October 14, from 10 until 1, for the aid of the welfare work of the organization. The ladies are asking all mothers whose children attend these schools to kindly contribute to this sale. Many good things to eat will be sold at a reasonable price.

A request was made by the president, Mrs. Harry McKee, that the members attend the meetings of the school board which are held on the last Wednesday evening of each month, at 8 o'clock, in the Vista Grande school on Mission street. This request was made in order that the parents can better understand the conditions under which the board is working and trying to benefit our schools. Refreshments were served by the officers after the meeting adjourned.

Building New Home

Mr. and Mrs. John Viotti, of Irvington street, have started building a beautiful home on the corner of Templeton and Irvington, which will surely be a splendid addition to the neighborhood.

JOB'S DAUGHTERS CONCLAVE VOTED MOST SUCCESSFUL

The third annual session of the Grand Guardian Council, Order of Job's Daughters, which convened in Long Beach, September 22-24, was most enjoyable. Much praise was due to Miss Enid A. Thrash, the newly elected Grand Guardian.

Hotel Breakers was the Grand Council headquarters, and the delegates were well pleased with the courteous treatment accorded them.

The Grand Council opened with an elaborate ball and reception given in honor of the Grand Guardian, Mrs. Ida B. Smith, and other grand officers, at the Scottish Rite Cathedral on Thursday evening. The guests were welcomed at the door by Mr. O. W. Newcomb and his committee of Guardians and Associate Guardians, and were presented to the honor guests by Miss Enola A. Thrash, Grand Messenger. Frank H. Jones officiated as chairman of the floor committee. The grand march was led by Mrs. Smith and Mr. Newcomb. Light refreshments were served to about 800. Delightful music was rendered by the Bellmont Shore girls' orchestra of Job's Daughters.

The business session opened promptly at 9 a. m. Friday morning at the Masonic Temple, with Mrs. Ida B. Smith, Grand Guardian, and O. W. Newcomb, acting Grand Associate Guardian, presiding.

Mr. George Buck, representing the city of Long Beach, welcomed the assembly, and Mr. Newcomb extended greetings to all, while Mrs. Smith gave a very pleasing response to both.

The pleasure of the dinner at Hotel Breakers, Friday night, was enhanced by the rousing welcome accorded the members of the dinner group by the Boy Scout executives, who were also dining in the Hall of the Galleons, both groups joining in singing "Blest be the Tie That Binds."

The outstanding feature of the session was the beautiful installation of officers, held at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, Saturday evening, when a large delegation of members and friends gathered to witness the ceremony which placed Miss Enola A. Thrash at the head of the order in California. The following elective officers were installed: Grand Guardian, Enola A. Thrash; Associate Grand Guardian, Matturp Jensen; Grand Messenger, Elizabeth Turner; Grand Guide, Mary Hinds; Grand Marshal, Stella Jensen; Grand Secretary, Ida B. Smith; Grand Treasurer, Adeline Harris; Grand Chaplain, Adell Klock; Grand Librarian, Ruth Sayer; Grand Musician, Nana King Custer.

The Associate Grand Guardian, Mr. M. Jensen, of Lawndale, tells us that in the state of California there are fifty-one Bethels, with a membership of over 4,000 young ladies between the ages of 13 and 20.

The purpose of this organization is to band together girls, who are Masonically affiliated, for moral and spiritual upbuilding, to teach the love of God, of country, of home and family, and a deep reverence for the teachings of the Holy Scripture.

The trials and tribulations of Job are typical human experiences.

"Life is a war,
Eternal war with woe; who bears it best,
Deserves it least."

The Bethels are under the supervision of men and women of high ideals, well known in Masonic circles and in the Order of the Eastern Star, who are greatly interested in the work, and especially qualified and equipped to render sufficient service in the development and training of the girls who are so dear to those of Masonic connection. We are living in an age of youth. Your life devoted to its cause, is the greatest service you can render to our country.

WEBB NEGLECTS TO SEEK BRIDGE FRANCHISE

Colonel Frank E. Webb, bridge promoter, evidently considered he has not much chance to get favorable action from the supervisors Monday on his application for a franchise to construct a toll bridge from Candlestick Point to Alameda, for when the matter came up for hearing last Monday before the supervisors, neither Webb nor his associates were present to present their case. The supervisors ruled that the notice of intention had expired and could only be renewed by publication.

The application of Webb was being published, as is required by law, while the supervisors were considering a similar application of Robert W. Thompson. The latter was denied a franchise as the supervisors took the stand that the granting of any other franchises for bridges at this time would interfere with the financing of the Little Coyote Point project.

BEAUTY A TOWN ASSET

In spite of the apparent commercialism of the age in which we live, it is evident to any observer that the American people are rapidly developing a greater appreciation of the beautiful. This is not confined to the wealthy classes but extends to the great masses in the towns and villages and in the rural districts. New towns and new sections of the older ones are being laid out with wider streets, with provision for larger lawns, more trees, shrubbery and flowers, and a more attractive setting generally.

New houses show better architecture and greater harmony with their surroundings, while unsightly yard fences have largely disappeared. The net result of all these modern developments is beauty. And aside from the satisfaction which it affords the eye, it pays in dollars and cents.

Beautiful cities, towns and villages attract people. They attract permanent residents, they attract tourists, and they attract trade. It is natural that a person selecting a trading center will choose a town that is beautiful and clean in preference to one that is unsightly and dirty, if other conditions are anywhere near equal.

Therefore, it behooves the authorities of any community, as well as each individual citizen, to make the most of their opportunities for improving the appearance of the place in which they live. Beauty and cleanliness are a town's best assets.

ORGANIZE LIFE-SAVING CORPS

Readiness for public service at work and at play is evident in the organization of a Red Cross life-saving corps in Sacramento by men and women employees of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. Sixty members are enrolled and training, already well in progress, will continue during the winter months.

The Sacramento life-saving corps is the third of its kind to be established on the Pacific Coast, the first two having been formed at Stockton and San Diego by employees of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. The purpose of the corps is to give members proficiency in life-saving, distance and speed in swimming and diving. Membership is not confined to expert swimmers, for beginners are encouraged to enroll.

The Sacramento corps is under the instruction of Captain F. A. Erickson and five assistants, Bruce Parady, Charles Boyde, Chester Stone, Ben Gardiner and Don Lange.

What Think Ye of Christ? Whose Son is He?

Sermon delivered by Father James Donohoe at St. Maximus church last Sunday:

Long before our restless age, Christ asked the Pharisees this question to prove to them that He was God. Unlike Peter they were slow in confessing—"Thou art Christ the Son of the living God." They knew He was the son of David, but like a great many modern thinkers when it came to a question of Divinity, they lapsed into doubt or unbelief. Would a God, they asked themselves, "strip Himself of His divine garments to put on the mean rags of humanity?" Would a God become a shivering baby, live a dull, obscure life in a remote corner of the East and die the death of a felon? Christ, who personified Faith, stood before them as a living defense of His incarnation. Yes! He seemed to say, a God would do all these things. Charity would lead Him to make any sacrifice for the greater good of mankind. But the Pharisees judged only from the standpoint of reason—and reason is helpless without authority. It needs some form of faith. Since they had no faith to bear upon, they left the question unanswered and unheeded.

Unhappily there are many of this type in the world today who deny Christ's divinity and tell you that at most He was the wisest and best man who ever lived. But they will not accept His doctrines that have been confirmed by so many miracles. Behind the mask of hypocrisy, a man of this type will tell you that "he would like to believe, but cannot." This is a lie. He is not honest with himself. Unbelief is the daughter of pride, the sinful weakness of will and reason. God holds faith within the reach of everyone. It can be gained by everyone as easily as by a man in the Gospel who threw himself upon the assistance of the Blessed Redeemer and said: "I do believe, Lord, help my unbelief."

"What think ye of Christ, whose Son is He?" We answer this question every day of our lives. We acknowledge Him as God's Son by taking advantage of some of the countless opportunities that present themselves daily to demonstrate our love of Him and our neighbor.

Our neighbors are two types. One we call moral. He fulfills his promises, pays his debts and keeps his domestic affairs out of the newspapers and divorce courts. Consequently he is trusted and respected. We do not find it difficult to love this neighbor.

The other type never tells the truth when a lie would serve his purpose. He is never expected to keep his promise or pay his debts. He neglects his wife and family and goes where mirth is fast and free. He is hard-hearted, merciless and uncharitable. We call such a one bad or immoral. We find it difficult loving this type of neighbor, yet he needs our sympathy rather than our scorn.

Christ never promoted His kingdom by scolding sinners. You remember that woman left uncondemned by men. Before He entered the scene, they were prepared to stone her to death. Then Christ voiced His challenge: "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone." They saw the righteous anger gleaming in His eye and realized that any arm raised against the woman would fall paralyzed by their side. They slunk away in silence and shame.

Christ turned to the woman and asked: "Woman, doth no man condemn thee?" And she answered: "No, Lord." "Then neither will I," said Christ. "Go and sin no more."

When we feel and exercise like charity, then are we fulfilling those great binding commandments, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Christ tested the Pharisees' love and faith. He put to them the question, "What think ye of Christ?" They left Him unanswered. Later the same question was proposed to St. Peter. His answer was a direct profession of love for the Lord His God, and won its reward. St. Peter was raised to the Pontificate.

Toward the end of the second year of our Lord's public ministry, He sent His disciples by twos and twos into the towns and villages of Judea, where they preached His doctrine to all who would hear the word of God. Their mission over, they again gathered together around the Master near the town of Caesarea Philippi.

Cesarea Philippi was a small walled town built by Philip, tetrarch of Galilee, in honor of Caesar, the emperor of Rome. Later the name Philippi was added to distinguish it from another Caesarea further to the south, built in honor of Augustus. Commentators tell us that it was in the evening when the disciples gathered together to recount to our Lord the experiences of their missionary labors. After listening for a time, Christ turned to them with the question, "But whom do men say that I am?" Many varied opinions as to the character of our Lord existed.

"Some," answered the disciples, "say Thou art Elias, others that Thou art a prophet, others that Thou art John the Baptist." Then turning to them our Lord asked, "But whom do you say that I am?" And Peter, answering, said: "Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God."

Turning to him Christ said: "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jona, because flesh and blood hath not revealed this to thee but My Father who is in heaven. Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against her. I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven."

The very words of our Lord indicate that He spoke to Peter alone. "Blessed art thou, Simon." Would the mere expression of an adopted opinion call for a special blessing from our Lord. Moreover, our Lord expressly states that it was not human understanding or learning that informed Peter or His divinity. "Flesh and blood hath not revealed this to thee, but My Father who is in heaven." Then, too, we see our Lord acting toward St. Peter as God the Father had acted throughout the ages in changing or giving a name to one selected for a special mission that would typify the work or mission.

Eve is called because she is the mother of all the living; John is the messenger of God; Saul is renamed Paul, so likewise is Simon's name changed to Peter, the rock upon which Christ Our Lord will build His Church. His selection is a reward for his faith in the Divinity of Christ, his Master. Through a divine revelation Peter tells who Christ is, the Son of God, and Christ the Saviour tells all future generations that Peter is the Rock, the head of the Church till the commission of the world.

Loading up several ships with malcontents and radical extremists, the president of Chile sent them to an island in the Pacific with his good wishes and hopes that they might work out a civilization to their own liking.

Out there they can throw bombs, they can engage in any violence or do any of the stunts which they were carrying on in Chile.

If they object to established institutions in their own island bailiwick, it will be their right to bomb them. Whatever is wrong in the conduct of affairs, they can demolish with torch and blasting powder.

Being of like minds, they can apply their philosophy of violence without challenge from those who believe in governments, laws and established authority. It is their island, and there will be no capitalist hand to wrong them or oppose them or humiliate them.

If they believe in the torch and the infernal machine and violence, why should they not on their own island domain pursue liberty as they see it, and shoot up the town or blow up the banks or burn up all the temples of authority? If with them the bomb is preferable as an instrument of freedom to the ballot box, it will be theirs, if they so will, to bomb the ballot boxes. If a written constitution is the concoction of capitalism, they can spurn it or blow it into fragments and perdition with injury to no emissary of the capitalistic class.

"I'll take the responsibility," said Ashton. "Until I know some reason that isn't absolutely farcical for arresting a man, I won't arrest him. At the same time I shall be glad to hear this story of yours."

The doctor nodded. "Well," he said, "since you're in no hurry, I think I'll take time to light a cigar myself."

He had it drawing comfortably and had got himself comfortably ensconced in a big easy chair, his feet stretched out in front of him upon a tabouret, before he began to talk.

"Do you remember," he asked, "what we chatted about on our drive to St. Martin's hospital the other night?"

"If my memory serves me correctly," said Ashton, "we didn't talk about the murder at all. You spent most of the time, unless I am mistaken, telling pirate stories."

The doctor nodded. "Do you remember my telling you how Bully Franklin came to his end? He was killed by one of his crew as the result of jealousy and a love affair. Now that murder had some rather interesting consequences—"

"What is this," Ashton interrupted, "a parable? Am I supposed to draw some subtle, devious psychological connection between that murder and this one that we're concerned with?"

"Not at all," said the doctor. "I know you much too well. The connection between that murder and this is literal. It's about the most direct connection that could possibly exist between two events separated by half a world and nearly two decades of time. The second murder was the logical consequence of the first; the second act of the tragedy. I don't say the last act, because I suspect there's another still to come."

"You've actually traced a connection?" Ashton asked with a gasp.

"Let me tell my story right-end-to," said the doctor. "You'll see the connection plainly enough when I come to it. I told you, I think, that Franklin's crew became completely disorganized after his death, and that most of the members of it were apprehended and paid the penalty of their crimes. There were two, however, who escaped. One of them was his first mate, Josiah Haines. The other man was Franklin's murderer. He disappeared, too, at least he was never brought to justice. The authorities, for some reason, didn't seem to regard his capture as especially important, for no price was ever put upon his head. That man's name was Henry Morgan."

I had seen what was coming, but it was clear that Ashton had not. His eyes opened wide, his jaw dropped slack, the cigar he held fell from his nerveless fingers.

"Henry Morgan!" he repeated.

"The same man?"

"Undoubtedly the same. He fled almost immediately after committing the murder, but not until he had gone through his chief's pockets, and possibly rifled his stateroom besides. At any rate, he got away with ready cash Franklin had upon him—and he was famous, I remember, for carrying a good deal—and also some papers. The money he got was utterly insignificant compared to the potential value of another thing he took with him. That other thing was the map, of which I spoke just now."

He stretched out his arms, rose from his chair and took a turn or two about the room.

"I ought to amend that last remark," he continued. "I don't know myself how great the potential value of that map may be. Its importance in the eyes of Josiah Haines was undoubtedly very great, and Haines was in a position to know, if anyone was. Franklin always had a reputation for possessing a good business head. Many as were the robberies he committed, numerous as were the unfortunate people whom he murdered outright, he gained more by fraud than by violence. He cheated vastly more men than he killed. I have little doubt that he laid up a really considerable fortune. But whatever it amounted to, he hid it in that particularly forsaken corner of the world which is indicated by a cross upon that map. As I said, Morgan got the map and fled to America with it."

"It seems to me," Ashton interjected, "that he would have done better to have gone straight to this forsaken island and collected the treasure first. But then, so far as that goes, how do you know he didn't?"

"Because he couldn't," said the doctor. "Franklin had outwitted him after all. He had to make a map, for the location of the treasure was too complex to trust to memory. But he made the map perfectly worthless to anyone who was a stranger to his secret, by omitting latitude and longitude from it. There was nothing about it to inform its possessor where, in the whole South Pacific, that island was located; and the South Pacific is a big place. So Morgan did what was, perhaps, the most sensible thing he could have done; he hid himself in the securest place he could find and began making a collection of maps."

Ashton shook his head in perplexity. "Well," he said, "if applied psychology will enable you to make discoveries like that, I apologize to it most humbly."

"That wasn't psychology at all," said the doctor; "it was plain logic. I found torn up scraps of maps in his waste-paper basket, making it perfectly evident that he had destroyed them after they had served, or had failed to serve some purpose of his. That put him at once out of the class of the mere geographer. I knew he must have some standard he tested these maps by; knew that he must keep it in some easily accessible place. Finding it, after I had discovered a principle like that to guide me, was comparatively easy business."

"Go on," said Ashton; "I won't interrupt any more. The strangeness of this tale makes me feel as if I were losing my wits; but it's altogether too well corroborated not to listen to."

"Now," said the doctor, "for a moment we go back to Haines. I am inclined to think that he got possession of the other half of Franklin's secret, namely, the latitude and longitude of the island where the treasure was buried."

"If he knew that," I ventured, "why wasn't it enough for him? Why didn't he go and find the treasure for himself?"

"He couldn't dig up the whole island," the doctor replied. "I think it not unlikely that he went there, only to learn the futility of proceeding any farther without the map. There is another possible alternative; that he never happened upon the secret of latitude or longitude at all, though he had it lying right under his hand. At any rate, he knew that Morgan had the map. He knew, or felt sure, that with the map he could recover the treasure, and he believed the treasure well worth the trouble of recovering. I can't tell you whether he searched the world for his man, with the definite purpose—the sole purpose of finding him, or whether it was chance that at last, after a lapse of many years, put him upon the trail. But this much I do know, that he found him at last, and that Henry Morgan was murdered as the result of an attempt Haines made to recover the map."

"But the woman!" cried Ashton.

"You've told me nothing about her!"

"No," said the doctor. "In order to simplify the story, so far I have left her out, but she plays a very vital part in it. To tell you what that part is, I shall have to go back to the beginning of my story again. I hope I am not boring you." His smile, as he made that polite observation, had a touch of satirical grimace about it.

Ashton laughed a nervous laugh, and wiped his forehead with his handkerchief.

"Bored!" he ejaculated. "Go ahead with the yarn."

"You remember the Maori girl about whom Franklin and Morgan had their quarrel? They were both in love with her. But Morgan murdered Franklin and then disappeared, so that from having two lovers, the girl was left without any. Franklin was, no doubt, the one she cared about, in spite of the fact that he was fat and bald-headed, by no means a romantic type of lover. But he had a charm about him, there's no getting away from that, and he carried it to the day of his death."

"Anyhow, some months after Franklin's death she bore him a daughter. She must have been bitterly disappointed that it was not a son; but, making the best of a bad matter, she swore the child, upon her deathbed, to avenge the murder of her father."

"Well, the girl grew up, and in some way or other—I don't know whether it was by chance or design—she fell into the hands of Josiah Haines, and was used by him as the mere instrument in carrying out his purpose. I don't know certainly whether it was by her aid that he got on Morgan's trail; but this I do know, that he dispatched her to the Oak Ridge house that night for the purpose of stealing Henry Morgan's precious map from him."

"I do not know positively whether he ordered her to murder him by way of exacting recompense for all the trouble his flight had caused, but that is what she did. She made a tourniquet out of a violin string, with two loops in it and a pipe stem, with which she strangled the old man, exactly according to the etiquette of the part of the world from which she comes. And then she came away, but without the map. Two days after the murder she escaped from the hospital, a fact which can't be much of a mystery to anyone who saw her get out of the third story window of Henry Morgan's study, as Phelps and I did the next night."

"An amazing tale," commented Ashton when he had finished. "And yet I've lived in this world long enough to be aware that amazing things are always happening in it, infinitely more amazing than the things men make up to put in books. But you haven't yet told me what connection Wilkins and this housemaid can have with the crime, except by pointing out the coincidence that the girl comes from New Zealand."

"But the thing I most want you to do, the thing I most earnestly beg you to do is to suggest how I can set about finding this wild girl, in whose actual person the crime was committed. I beg of you to give over these elaborate experiments upon people who can't have an important connection with the crime and devote this great mind of yours to the apprehension of the real criminal. If we can get the girl, we shall get hold of her accomplice fast enough, or, perhaps, I should say her principal."

The doctor smiled. "This morning at the breakfast table," he observed, "you were very confident that the police would be able to get hold of her in the course of the day. You said a wild creature like that couldn't remain at liberty. I say it's true she couldn't."

"But," objected Ashton, "she has."

The doctor shrugged his shoulders impatiently. "Why can't you be reasonable?" he asked. "If a thing's impossible, it can't happen. If it's true that a wild creature can't go at large in this community for twenty-four hours without being apprehended, and if it's also true that in twenty-four hours no such creature has been apprehended, then there is only one logical conclusion to come to, namely, that she has ceased to be a wild creature, gibbering in an outlandish language, and has become a much more inconspicuous member of society."

Ashton opened his eyes wide. "What do you mean?"

"Psychology," said the doctor; "hocus-pocus and any of your other names for it that you choose to apply. Didn't you hear me tell Reinhardt at the hospital that that girl was in a hypnotic or subjective state? When a person is in such a state, they can come out of it, and when they come out, they're likely to be altogether different from what they were when they were in that state."

Ashton sprang to his feet. "Do you know where she is?" he demanded. "Or can you describe her so that I and my men can find her?"

"I don't know where she is at this moment," said the doctor quietly. "She was in this room half an hour ago."

In that moment my chief had his revenge for all the flippancies, tolerant contempt, and good-natured sneers with which Ashton had belabored the profession and science which was dearest to his heart. For once the lawyer was beyond the power of speech.

The doctor, too, kept silent for a while to let the momentous nature of the astounding fact which he had just disclosed sink in. Then he began to explain to the astonished attorney.

"I want you to understand very clearly, in the first place, that it has been by my own methods, with the addition, I'll admit, of a little plain, unmerited good luck, that I've solved this mystery. Harvey's testimony at the inquest was my clue. In my examination of him, which I conducted without asking him a single question, without once referring directly to the crime that was committed at Oak Ridge, I proved him innocent as convincingly as the strongest alibi would have proved him innocent, more convincingly, in fact, because the real criminal in this case could prove an alibi, too. And in my further examination of him I discovered Jane Perkins, and without learning her exact address, I ascertained the neighborhood in which she lived. She was the woman with whom the profile on the window shade in the Morgan house associated itself in his mind. Only by a very extraordinary coincidence could this woman, with the same sort of profile, the same colored hair and the same kind of cloak, have been any other than the one whose hands strangled old Morgan."

"The telephone conversation which you held in my laboratory with one of your subordinates settled her identity almost beyond a doubt. The fact that her name was Jane Perkins and that she was a perfectly conventional type of English chambermaid didn't throw me off the track for a moment, because I knew, as you might have known, that the strange, wild personality of the girl we found in the hospital was fugitive, and possibly accidental."

Hard to Eradicate Myths About Snakes

Fear of snakes has led to a belief in various myths about the habits of different species. Children pass along the legend that the hoop snake possesses the power to form itself into a hoop and roll in pursuit of its victim.

Tradition holds that the so-called glass or jointed snake has the ability to break into pieces, and may reassemble itself later—if its head has not been captured or destroyed. Then there is the myth of the stinging snake. Although this snake has a somewhat formidable tail shaped like a horn or spike, it is incapable of piercing or stinging anything with it. Perhaps the most popular of these myths concerns the belief that if one throw a hair from a horse's tail into a river or lake the hair will promptly turn into a water snake and swim.

SAFETY ON HIGHWAYS

FLOOD RELIEF REPORT

For the first seven months of 1927, 11,448 automobile deaths were recorded in the United States, a gain of 418 over the same period last year. The total may reach 25,000 before the year passes.

Stringent licensing of drivers, with cancellation of driver's permit for careless or dangerous operation of automobiles, would help greatly in reducing the number of automobile accidents and deaths. It would cost nothing at all, compared with compulsory automobile liability insurance, which is being advocated all over the nation, and would go far toward alleviating the necessity for such insurance—if such necessity may be said to exist at all.

Making it a prison offense to drive without a license or after a license revoked, as it is an offense to have burglar tools or explosives, would do what compulsory automobile liability insurance could not possible do—it would enforce personal co-operation and responsibility, without which there is no safety.

About the only evil effect of Lindbergh's flight has been the urge to write alleged poetry about it.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover recently reported to President Coolidge that 46,000 persons left destitute by floods in the valley of the Mississippi and its tributaries are still being furnished food by the Red Cross and other relief agencies. At one time the number of persons dependent on public support reached 614,000.

All the refugees have returned to their homes and provision have been made to continue relief work until January 1, and longer if necessary.

Co-operation between mortgage holders, local banks and the Emergency Finance Corporation has been established to give financial support to farmers in making their 1928 crop.

A strong health unit has been established in each county touched by the flood, financed for the next eighteen months jointly by the state, the counties, the Rockefeller Foundation, the United States Public Health Service and furnished with supplies by the Red Cross. Except in a few counties, the state of the public health is now better than normal.

It is expected that emergency repairs to all important levee breaks will be completed by December 1, but Mr. Hoover points out that the establishment by Congress of effective permanent flood control is essential to restoring confidence, security and credit to the devastated regions.

Considering the magnitude of their task, the various relief agencies engaged in assisting the unfortunate flood sufferers have secured highly creditable results. It is now up to Congress to provide the means to insure that such a disaster shall not occur again.

A. A. Anderson, secretary of the Pacific Coast Building-Loan Association, in an address at the Pacific States savings and loan conference, recommends newspaper advertising as the most effective and economical means of reaching the public.

Further, he urged that the building-loan associations throughout the United States should have a fund of at least $1,000,000 for such a campaign.

As Mr. Anderson knows, it has been fully demonstrated that the newspaper stands by itself as a carrier of messages to the greatest possible number of people. It is the only medium that is sure to reach the citizens of a community and be read. This fact is being more fully appreciated every day.

The smaller city dailies and weeklies are the great medium for reaching the masses of the people who represent the majority of the reading and buying power of the nation.

AGE OF PRESIDENTS

MUST REDUCE FIRE WASTE

Discussion of prospective presidential candidates, some of whom have reached an advanced age, naturally suggests an examination of the record to see how old former presidents were upon taking office.

This record discloses that only five were over 60 and only five were under 50 at the time they became president.

The three of greatest age at inauguration were William Henry Harrison, 68; James Buchanan, 65; and Zachary Taylor, 64. Harrison died in office exactly one month after he became president.

The three youngest were: Theodore Roosevelt, 42; U. S. Grant, 46; and Grover Cleveland, 47.

Among the men prominently mentioned for the nominations in 1928, Andrew W. Mellon, 73, is the oldest. Other Republicans include Lowden, 66; Hughes, 65; Dawes, 62; Borah, 62; Longworth, 58; Hoover, 53. Democratic possibilities include Reed, 66; Pomerene, 64; Woollen, 63; Robinson, 55; Smith, 54; Donahey, 54; Meredith, 51; and Ritchie, 51.

President Coolidge and William G. McAdoo, who have apparently eliminated themselves from the race next year, are 55 and 64, respectively.

While several of those most prominently mentioned seem to be rather old to assume the arduous duties of president, we may be reminded that President von Hindenburg of the German republic was 78 when elected to that office, and is still going strong at the age of 80.

TOO MUCH THEORY

BASEBALL AT NIGHT

Approving the idea that our system of education, even professional education, is encumbered with much superfluous theory and non-essentials, an eminent English engineer, C. B. Gordon-Sale, in a recent article expresses doubt concerning the value of such an amount of higher mathematics as must be mastered by young engineers.

He declares that "many of the involved theories, embodying yards of calculations, are out of place and liable to warp the mental outlook to such an extent that it takes years of experience to again attain a reasonable view of engineering problems."

He further asserts that he has never had to use much that he learned during his technical training, but that he constantly needed knowledge of cost estimating and other practical matters not taught in school, but which had to be picked up through corrected mistakes.

Referring to the plea that higher mathematics and an accompanying host of algebraic symbols are necessary for the formation of logical modes of thought, Mr. Gordon-Sale thinks the idea does not work out, because he believes that "cramping" is bad for any one, and adds:

"The amount of matter that one has to get through is so great that there is no time for basic principles; the sole aim of college days is to get the numerical problems right."

Mr. Gordon-Sale merely expresses what a good many thoughtful persons, including some of the leading educators, have suspected for quite a while. And the fault he points out is by no means confined to engineering courses.

Turkey's new capital, Angora, has a population of about 58,000.

Electricity is now scheduled to bring professional baseball at night. It has already fooled the hens and caused them to lay eggs overtime, raised plants where formerly only darkness prevailed, has furnished food for trout farms by causing bugs to fly low to the water, freezes ice, curls milady's hair and does so many other unheard-of things, that lighting a baseball diamond at night will seem tame in comparison.

An Arkansas barber's home was burned, probably by some fellow he had worried about having a singe.

INCREASE SAFETY AT RAILROAD CROSSING

A new safety device to lessen the element of danger at railroad crossings is in operation here. The device is designed to give warning to motorists approaching grade crossings. When the railroad crossing is neared by the one-armed or the fast driver, straps suspended from a bar overhead knock against the top of the car passing notifying the driver that although he can't see the railroad crossing he is near one.

ROADSIDE MARTS DO BIG BUSINESS

Estimated $100,000,000 Paid Direct to Farmers for Produce This Season.

Roadside markets have done a roaring business during this touring season and a conservative estimate places at $100,000,000 the produce that motorists will buy direct from the farmers in 1927.

This estimate is based on reports from road cars of the A. A. A., and from many of the individual clubs of the National Motor federation. Reports disclose that while roadside marketing has received more intensive development in some states than in others, the growth of the movement is essentially on a national scale.

Business of Importance.

"This is an aspect of the national business created by motoring that is assuming major importance," Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile association, declared. "At the present rate of growth it should become a half-billion-dollar business within a few years."

Mr. Henry called attention to the fact that in order for the farmer and his cash customers, the motorists from the city, to reap the full benefit from the facilities afforded by the roadside market, certain abuses had to be eliminated. He said:

"The farmers, as far as our reports indicate, deal honestly with their clients, and it is not their fault if dishonest traders from the city rent corners at country crossroads and sell to unsuspecting motorists produce purchased in city markets, and at much higher prices than that produce could command in the city. This is still going on, but it can easily be eliminated if all the states follow the example of states such as New Jersey, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and others, in which roadside marketing associations have been set up. These organizations will not only increase business, but they will be able to eliminate the dishonest trader."

Motivators' Feeling.

The A. A. A. executive believes that roadside trading has done much in the past few years to modify the lingering antagonism of the farmers toward the city motorists. There is still, however, he says, room for improvement in their relations.

Not Difficult Finding the "Meanest Motorist"

Attention seems to be so focused on finding the "meanest motorist" that one has little time to look for the most courteous driver. A recent incident produces one candidate for the latter honor.

The driver in question had been circling the block for about fifteen minutes looking for a parking space. Finally, he came upon an ideal opening. Just as he was ready to enter the space, he noticed another car preparing to back into it. Tempted, the first driver hesitated a moment, then backed out and permitted the other man to take the place.

"You're foolish. You could have beaten him into that space," said a friend who was riding with him.

"Yes, I could have beaten him all right, but he found the place first."

To the motorist who has seen this incident enacted hundreds of times with an altogether different ending, this anecdote probably will be proof that the age of miracles has not passed.

Roadless Automobiles

Trackless street cars having become a reality, attention now turns to the development of the roadless motor vehicle. The introduction of balloon tires is believed to be the beginning of this form of travel. Cars now can negotiate with comfort roads that formerly were impossible. New methods of spring suspension are being experimented with, so it may be possible for the body of a car to remain virtually level while the four wheels adjust themselves to all conditions.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

California continued to maintain third position among the ten leading building states during August, the valuation of permits being issued here valued at $29,088,740.

San Leandro claims the distinction of having the only California traffic officer equipped with an airplane and further boasts that its aerial traffic cop department is half as large as that of New York City. San Leandro has one airplane officer and New York two.

In search of new and more accurate data on the speed of light, Professor Albert A. Michelson, noted physicist of the University of Chicago, arrived in California last week. He will spend several months in research work at the Mt. Wilson Observatory.

The steamer "California," the largest boat ever built in America, was launched at Newport News, Virginia, last Saturday. This boat will be in the California to New York service of the Panama Pacific Lines and will make its maiden voyage in January, 1928.

Another pay roll was assured Los Angeles industry during the last week when the Western Concrete Pipe Company announced the purchase of forty acres on which to build a $300,000 factory which will employ 600 men. The property is situated at South Gate Industrial Center on Manchester avenue, and its cost was $220,000.

Nearly 100,000 persons entered California by automobile during August of this year, it is revealed in the report of the first actual count of passengers in automobiles crossing the State borders. A communication from the State Department of Agriculture to the Automobile Club of Southern California touring bureau shows that 43,536 persons in 13,022 cars entered via Southern California routes on the eastern border during the thirty-one days of last month.

Feeding fish by electricity is an innovation in trout rearing to be initiated by the Fresno County Sportsmen's Club in its rearing pond at Dinkey creek. Bright incandescent lamps have been placed at the ends of the pond, which will accommodate 50,000 young rainbow trout. The light is expected to attract myriads of swarms of insect life at night, so that the trout may eat them.

October may be an "R" month, but it doesn't mean that it is any safer to eat mussels than any other time, health officers warn the people of San Francisco. The Board of Health declares that the mussels from the beach section from San Francisco to Half Moon Bay, and from the purported commercial beds as well, have been polluted by some biological change that may take years to clear. It may never again be safe to eat the mussels from this section.

Operating of illicit stills, hidden in sylvan glades, will no longer be able to protect their investment by watching highways and woodland lanes when aerial plans of E. R. Bohner, federal prohibition administrator for California, are carried into effect. Bohner announced last week that within a few days an airplane "equipped with binoculars and a sense of smell" would take the air and sail here and there on a still-hunt. This will be the first use of airplanes for rum scouting in the history of California prohibition enforcement, Bohner said.

State traffic officers are to be returned to their motorcycles by an order issued last week by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles. During the past few years, Snook pointed out, there has been a tendency for the traffic police to forsake motorcycles for touring cars. The practice became so general that when Snook became motor vehicle chief nearly half of the traffic force were driving automobiles. Snook believes that the use of the motor cars has impaired the efficiency of the squad, particularly in view of the fact that the automobiles driven by many of the officers are incapable of matching speed with some of the more powerful cars they are called upon to pursue.

In order to decrease the number of accidents on the State highways the Railroad Commission announced its intention last week of adding a new general order to its code, covering auto stage passenger operators. The new order will require all stage operators to wire or telegraph the Railroad Commission immediately after accidents on their lines have occurred. Directly after they have finished complying with the requirement they also will be compelled to submit a written report describing the accident in detail. These two stipulations in the order will enable the commission to institute an immediate investigation of highway accidents all over the State.

Hot weather made the outdoor community swimming pool at Brawley, Imperial Valley so uncomfortable that the city council decided to come to the relief of swimmers by having five tons of ice dumped into the pool.

Actual taxable wealth in the city of Oakland was set at $335,703,620 last week in a resolution made by the City Council for the information of the financial market. The figure was computed from Alameda county assessment rolls for 1927-28, and is the so-called "true value" that bears a 10 to 3 ratio to the assessed valuation.

California's greatest highway traffic for a given area is in the nine counties of the San Francisco Bay district. State Highway Engineer Robert M. Morton announced last week as a result of the State's latest traffic count taken at 700 selected points. The census also showed that 25 per cent of each week's traffic throughout the State generally comes on Sunday.

Kern River district, one of the oldest producers of oil in California, continues to put forth the greatest effort in development of new wells as indicated in the weekly report of the state oil and gas supervisor. During the past week, five new holes, were begun there while one other well was spudded in near Buttonwillow in wildcat territory.

Operating revenues for the entire system of all public utilities operating in the state of California during 1926 aggregated $1,001,170,243.26, as compared with $955,250,075.80 for 1925, an increase of $45,940,167.46, according to the annual report of the Department of Finance and Accounts of the Railroad Commission just compiled by W. C. Fankhauser, financial expert of the commission.

How long will it take to motor over all the roads in California? This casual inquiry coming usually from out-of-state tourists brings vague answers. Figures of existing roads in this state, compiled by the California State Automobile Association, show that a motorist traveling 200 miles a day would require 385 days to traverse every road once. The total mileage is 77,000. Should the motorist decide to make the trip merely over the state highway system, the tour could be accomplished in approximately 33 days as the total state system is 6,591 miles.

Ducks, geese, jacksnipe and mudhens will be the lawful prey of nimbros, starting October 1, until the 15th of January. After a miserable season last year, in which the shooting was the poorest in general ever known to the state, the sportsmen are hoping for a better year.

Allocation of San Diego destroyers at various Superior California ports for Navy Day, October 27th, was announced last week by Rear Admiral Luke McNamee, destroyer force commander. The ships will be distributed as follows: Benicia, destroyer Moody; Martinez, destroyer Hull; Eureka, destroyers William Jones and J. F. Burnes; Crescent City, destroyers Farragut and Thompson.

Congressman Charles F. Curry's proposed national legislation pledging the Federal government to stand one-third of the $51,000,000 cost of Northern California's flood control project was last week declared "fair and reasonable" by Congressman John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, Republican floor leader in the House of Representatives. Congressman Tilson completed a tour of the flood control districts last week. Under Congressman Curry's bill the State government, the Federal government and the land owners would each stand one-third of the total expense of flood control work.

Chico, Butte County, has been assured of the construction in the city limits of a powdered milk and by-products plant which will use, 60,000 pounds to raw milk a day, the product of 2,500 dairy cows. This is the announcement made by S. L. Bainbridge, city councilman and president of the Chico Real Estate Board. The plant will be ready for operation and contracts will be signed by dairymen by January 15th. It will represent an investment of about $40,000. It is estimated that the cash returned to farmers will approximate $33,000 per month.

A substantial growth in commerce and industry in California for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, is shown by figures compiled by the statistician of the state banking department. In making a general estimate of progress throughout the state the figures for total resources of banks operating in the state were used as a general guide to the progress of commerce and industry. The figure for June 30, 1926, was $3,706,466,000, which represented an increase of $214,081,000 over the previous year or 6.1 per cent. The total for the present year is $3,933,938,000, an increase of $127,492,000 or 3.4 per cent over the total for 1926. This constitutes a lesser gain than that recorded for 1926 but it is nevertheless a very substantial one.

Plans for the San Joaquin County Water Pageant and Regatta to be staged in Stockton October 1 and 2 have gained such momentum that they are requiring the attention of 150 active committeemen. A two-fold purpose behind it, the regatta will serve as a celebration over Federal recognition of the $6,000,000 Stockton deep water project and as a medium for reviving water sports in that city. Stockton, at one time, was one of the leading cities on the Pacific Coast in water sports. Committeemen for the coming regatta will serve as a nucleus for the Stockton Regatta Association which will sponsor annual regattas in that city.

The state-wide epidemic of infantile paralysis, which has been prevalent in California since early Summer, shows no signs of abatement in the number of new cases reported to the state department of public health last week. In that period seventy-one cases were reported, which is only a trifle above the average for the preceding several weeks. Dr. C. H. Halliday, chief epidemiologist of the department, stated last week that in his opinion the peak of the disease has been reached in Superior California, and that succeeding weeks will show a steady decrease.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE SNOWBIRD

Daddy had been encouraging Nick and Nancy to feed the little birds that came outside the window. There had been a sudden cold wave.

So one evening when it was time for their story he told them about the Thanksgiving snowbird had had the year before.

It would not be so very long before Thanksgiving would be around again.

"He was a very self-willed little fellow," commenced Daddy, "and he thought no one knew so much about life as he did."

"During the autumn he had become very chummy with the sparrows."

"His daddy and mother didn't like that much, as they were afraid he would become as rude and noisy as the sparrows were."

"When the cold weather came the snowbirds decided to leave, but the little willful snowbird was nowhere to be found."

"Where could he have gone?" asked Mother Snowbird, and Daddy Snowbird answered:

"Oh, probably he left this morning with the robins and wrens, for I saw him playing with them!"

"That eased Mother Snowbird's fears, and off they started."

"When the little snowbird saw that his family had flown away he came out from his hiding place."

"He really felt a little homesick and was sorry he hadn't gone, too; but, of course, he didn't dare admit

Chummy With the Sparrows.

It, for the sparrows had told him only stupid children were always with their parents.

"They admired his naughty disobedience and thought it was a great joke to worry his family."

"A few weeks went by, and the days became colder and colder."

"One night he felt so cold and so unhappy that he flew away from the sparrows, expecting to die any moment."

"The next morning he was found, half dead, by a little girl."

"She took him to her house, warmed his frozen feet and fed him bits of crumbs and drops of water."

"Slowly he began to recover."

"It was the day before Thanksgiving, and he was perched on the window-sill in the sun, when, to his huge joy, he saw Daddy and Mother Snowbird outside the window."

"He flew against the window glass. The little girl came rushing into the room to see what the trouble was."

"She was sure from his joyous actions that the other two snowbirds were his daddy and mother, so she opened the window, and the little bird flew out."

"Oh dear, we've been so frightened," said Mother Snowbird.

"Yes," said Daddy Snowbird, "we've been on ever so many trips looking for you, but now we'll hurry down home and fly fast, so as not to get cold, and then we'll be there in time for Thanksgiving Day."

"All the little birds will be there waiting for the Thanksgiving party. You're too young to be where it is cold by yourself, and we will look after you."

"You may be quite sure the little snowbird never had a happier Thanksgiving, and he realized that the older birds knew what was best for him."

THIS WOMAN FOUND RELIEF

After Long Suffering by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a little town of the middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine, and you can use these facts as a testimonial. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. E. Daugherty, 1308 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

Trapper Finds Site of Old Trading Post

Old Fort Hallett, an ancient trading post of the Hudson's Bay company, located in the remote Liard country, which was abandoned nearly 100 years ago and since lost, has been found. The old post has been the object of many unavailing searches in the last 40 years.

John Dalzell, trapper, aided by a tip from friendly Liard Indians, discovered the site near the mouth of Coal creek. An old root cellar gave him the first clue and he followed a well-defined trail three miles to a lake, nine miles long by three miles wide.

On the south bank of this lake stood an old cabin of squared logs (all Hudson's Bay posts are constructed of squared logs) the windows of which were covered with parchments of caribou skins. A quantity of lead for bullet molding was found. Dalzell is bringing out interesting mementos of the old post.

NOTES OF INTEREST FROM ALL CORNERS

There are now over eighteen million telephones in the United States.

Twenty-five million toll calls were handled over the lines of the Bell System in the state of Michigan last year. The toll calls increased 20 per cent in that period.

Gem of Poetic Fancy Is "America's Making"

This interpretation of the United States, titled "America's Making," was written some years ago by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of the Temple, Cleveland. It has been widely copied and quoted.

"God built him a continent of glory and filled it with treasures untold; "He studied it with sweet flowing fountains and traced it with long winding streams;

"He carpeted it with soft rolling prairies and columned it with thundering mountains;

"He graced it with deep-shadowed forests and filled them with song, "Then he called unto a thousand peoples and summoned the bravest among them,

"They came from the ends of the earth, each bearing a gift and a hope, "The glow of adventure was in their eyes, and in their hearts the glory of hope,

"And out of the bounty of earth and the labor of men;

"Out of the longing of hearts and the prayer of souls;

"Out of the memory of ages and the hopes of the world,

"God fashioned a nation in love, blessed it with purpose sublime, and called it America."

Gould Credited With French-Fried Potatoes

Like all others who take delight in a platter of crisp, hot French fried potatoes, I always supposed this particular way of preparing them was originated by some eminent French chef in the distant long ago, until along came one of those fellows who are always digging into history and finding things to shatter our pet illusions.

According to his version, the French fried potato originated not in France but in New York. One day, so the story goes, Jay Gould dropped into Delmonico's restaurant in that city and said: "I want potatoes quartered and fried in deep fat." The desire to imitate the doings of a Gould probably caused the use of potatoes fried in this way to assume the proportions of a fad, although, unlike many other fads, this one survived. For years these were known simply as quartered potatoes. Then Delmonico took to slicing them thinner and called them by the name under which they are now known throughout the country.

Whatever may be said of Jay Gould as a financier and railroad builder, all lovers of French fried potatoes are under lasting obligations to this forceful American.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Early Tax Exemptions

Cows were exempt from taxation in Ohio under the act of February 8, 1825. That act was the first provision for general property taxation and there were many exemptions, certain kinds of property being regarded as important in a new settlement. However, the cow exemption covered only one cow in the name of any one owner. The exemption was to encourage every householder to have a cow. Among other forms of property exempted were factories producing nails, leather, glass, salt, cotton or woolen goods, grist and saw mills, paper mills and distilleries. Whisky seems to have been looked upon then as an indispensable product. To encourage purchase of lands in the state by settlers, the act provided that such lands should be free from taxation for five years after the purchase.—Detroit News.

Excuse Not All Bad

When I make an excuse for myself—and goodness knows I have made many of them—I always feel somewhat guilty. Yet I am not sure that the excuse habit is entirely without its good side. It evidences at least a disposition to make matters appear better than they really are, and this, in turn, evidences a pride or self-respect of a sort, which qualities are commendable to some extent. The difficulty lies in one's inability to repair consequences in this way. As Lem Gidge said to the family cow, "Your eyes are wellsprings of innocence and your bearing is that of blamelessness, but the milk's spilled and your foot's in the bucket just the same, dodblast you!"—Portland Oregonian.

Oldtime Home Brewing

Brewing beer was a respectable household task among families along the Tigris and Euphrates rivers 9,000 years ago. Evidence of this high antiquity of the craft of brewing and its place in ancient social systems of Babylon and Egypt has been traced by German scientists of the Society of History and Bibliography of Brewing. There were laws about drinking in those days, the report shows. Certain rations of beer were allowed to each class of workers. Beer was also used in mixing medicines, and as an offering to the gods. Brewing was an organized business as early as 5000 B. C., it is stated.

Use of "Assignats"

The assignats or notes issued by the French revolutionary government between 1789 and 1796 were used as currency until they became valueless. They were issued on the security of lands of the crown, the church, the nobles and emigres, which had been appropriated, and they were inconvertible except in payment for the public lands. The total issue of assignats was over 45,000,000,000 francs.

Moroccan Town Well Called City of Blind

Blindness, in Marrakech (Morocco), is a woefully prevalent affliction. Scores of sightless beggars line the streets, squat in the market places, and thread their way with uncanny assurance through the mazes of the souks. More often than not there are two of them together and in many cases they make their appeal for alms in groups of from four to a dozen.

With or without a crude musical instrument or two, they chant incessantly their pleas to the passer-by, conjuring him in the name of Allah to share his coppers with his brethren who cannot see. Hour after hour this hoarse chanting goes on, rhythmically, pantingly, unceasingly—until it is a wonder that the rasping vocal cords do not fray out like an old shoe-string and refuse further service.

In his tour of the souks the visitor is led through a colorful arcade given over to dealers in the bright-hued cords from which the Arabs suspend their pouches and daggers. A little beyond the end of this covered passageway he is permitted to look at, but not enter, the mosque and sanctuary of Sidi Bel Abbas, the environs of which are peopled almost exclusively by the blind. Official figures are lacking, yet it may be said that the number of these unfortunates is estimated not in hundreds but in thousands. H. G. Wells once wrote a fantasy called "The Country of the Blind." Here is a City of the Blind in pitiful reality, with Sidi Bel Abbas as its patron saint.—Hamish McLaurin in "What About North Africa."

Mouth Kept Open to Protect Ear Drums

That an explosion may result in serious injury to the human ears is a well-known fact. Gunners often open their mouths to protect their ear drums while firing large guns, says a writer in the Pathfinder Magazine. When the mouth is open the air waves set in motion by the discharge of the gun enter the throat as well as the ears. Consequently the sudden pressure against the outside of the drums is counteracted by an equal pressure against the inside. Such, however, is not the practice in the United States navy. Men working in the turrets are well protected from concussion. Those in the more exposed positions usually use pledgets of cotton in their ears to protect the drums. Some use patent ear stoppers such as are manufactured by various commercial firms. Although special ear protectors and cotton are also used, at the coast artillery target practices it is a custom for the personnel taking part to open their mouths during the actual firing of the guns in order that the pressure on the ear drums may be equalized. The men also stand on their toes to relieve the body as much as possible of the shock of the explosion.

Emphatic Negatives

The redundant negative of which Sir Walter Raleigh made a spirited defense in his essays "On Writing and Writers," never is so daringly used in literature as in real life. A laborer, relates the Manchester Guardian, being given credit for groceries with a caution not to talk about it, replied: "If no one didn't tell no more about it nor what I do, they'll know no more nor what they do." The result is cumbersome but intelligible. So also was the inquiry of a sailor seeking a job: "I s'pose, mate, you don't know nobody what don't want nobody to do nothing, do you?"

Ancient Dutch City

Utrecht, which gave its name to the treaty signed there 214 years ago, is the capital of the province of Holland bearing the same name as that of the city. It is an ancient place, which appears frequently in European history, and especially in the history of Holland's long and heroic struggle against the Spanish oppressors for civil and religious freedom. The city today has a population of about 115,000. It is a railway center, only 22 miles south-east of Amsterdam and a strategic point in the line of defensive inundations called the "New Holland Water Line."

Largest Lump of Silver

It is said that the largest lump of pure silver ever discovered was found by an Indian in Sonora, Mexico, when that province was still a possession of Spain. The lump of silver weighed 2,750 pounds. Because of a dispute over its ownership the entire mass was appropriated by the Spanish crown. Earl V. Shannon, assistant curator of geology in the National museum, states that this story is not impossible. He has authentic record of a lump of silver weighing 400 pounds. A lump of pure silver found in Peru weighed 800 pounds.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Female of the Species

Absent-mindedness is sometimes deadly, and doubly so in the female of the species. Or, possibly it wasn't absent-mindedness. Anyway, when Blimston left for the office the other morning his wife reversed a certain daily custom, or at least she got it mixed up with certain other domestic duties. As he passed out onto the front porch she was standing in the kitchen door with a skillet in her hand. And she hurled the skillet at him and threw a kiss at the cat, which was trying to climb up onto the kitchen table.

The clean fuel for the home

We "launder" the Gas before you get it

It comes to you clean

The gas used in your home for cooking, water heating and house heating is delivered to you clean.

Right after gas is made it passes through large "scrubbing" tanks. Then it goes through purifiers. Only pure gas that burns clean passes into the pipes that lead to your home.

That is why gas is a clean fuel.

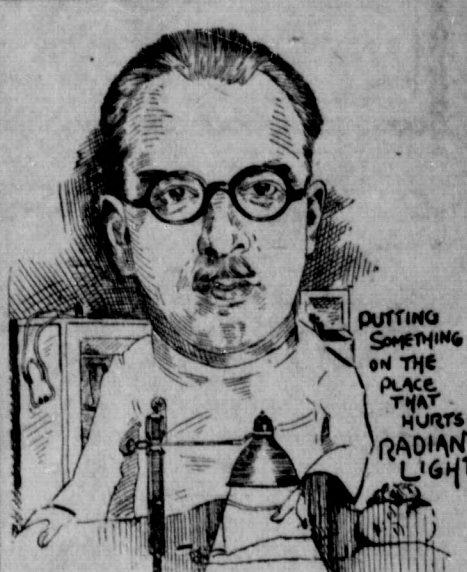

And gas is all fuel. When you want heat, it is instantly ready—to burn gently for a second or two or to burn vigorously for hours.

Because gas is so clean and convenient, a gas range, gas water heater or a gas-fired furnace saves your time and effort.
